The 2017 Summer School proposes an innovative programme around 2 tracks:

• International - EU Affairs
• French Language & Society

Professors teaching during the Four weeks in July will have the opportunity to teach small groups of students and propose methodological and interactive approaches.

Students will have the opportunity to divide their time in Lille between modules which focus on International and European affairs, including issues such as the crisis in Climate change, European identity and values, and migration. The courses in French language aims to enhance and perfect their language skills as well provide some understanding of the contemporary aspects of French society.

Sciences Po Lille's Summer School offers a variety of field trips and social events.

With its decidedly international focus, Sciences Po Lille welcomes exceptional students and prepares them for high-level careers in international organizations, NGO’s, European institutions.

Lille is a dynamic cultural center, with museums, concerts, theater, several malls and wonderful boutiques in the old town. This privileged geographical position, enhanced by its high-quality transport network, makes Lille a real gateway to Europe.
COURSE DESCRIPTIONS (4 courses)

RETHINKING THE EUROPEAN UNION

This module takes on an in-depth look at the state of the European Union in the 21st century in the wake of the European crisis. Students will explore the origins of the current crisis, the policies to overcome it, and the challenges to its functioning. This course will examine the EU’s history, its current problems, including those that led to its current crisis, and possible solutions to move forward. The students will discuss the role of political parties and the role of the European Parliament. The course will end with the students analyzing the main points of the EU’s history and its current challenges.

FROM CONFLICT PREVENTION TO CONSEQUENCE MANAGEMENT OF FUTURE CLIMATE CHANGE CRISIS

This course will be divided into 4 sessions introducing the institutions used by the EU. The first session will be organized around the issues of conflict prevention and crisis management and analyse the complex issues of civil-military relations of the European level. The second part of the course will allow students to take part in a stimulating “Modul Congress” simulation on a scenario dealing with the complex crisis management capabilities of the EU.

WHAT DO WE KNOW ABOUT THE VALUES OF THE EUROPEAN TODAY?

The European Union is a very complex political structure unlike a large range of cultures, from the North to the South, from the West to the East. Few citizens exclusively share a European identity, even though most European citizens enjoy the many benefits of the Union (common currency, freedom of movement, etc.). The module aims to examine critically its consequences and broad effects on the European Union.

FROM COAL AND STEEL TO CULTURAL GOODS: THE EUROPEAN DEVELOPMENT OF ECODIPLOMACY

The module aims to study the informal and formal opportunities of the EU. Students will explore the political dynamics that have shaped the European Union and examine the role of political parties in the EU’s decision-making process. The course will end with the students analyzing the main points of the EU’s history and its current challenges.

FRENCH LANGUAGE AND SOCIETY

This module aims to develop students’ ability to demonstrate some understanding of the French language and its culture. The course will also focus on the French language and society courses.
