Purpose of the course unit (module): programme competences to be developed
Rather than follow a historiographic thread, this reading-intensive course is organized around concepts, issues, and terms of art that open the study of cultural production to the creative flow of interdisciplinary dialogue. The range of conceptual approaches to the study of poetic texts and larger cultural formations discussed in the course invites the students to reconsider and discuss their own perspectives on the value of cultural phenomena and intellectual labour in the age of permacrisis.

		relation between form and content. Solid grasp of the discursive contingencies and their contradictions. Excellent, almost effortless, ability to conceptualise and substantiate one's reasoning. Independent and creative thinking. Fluent and error-free academic English. 9- Very good. The tasks have been very well carried out but lack the edge of excellence. Mostly apt use of the necessary critical and theoretical terms. A very good understanding of the relation between form and content. A reliable grasp of the discursive contingencies and most of their contradictions. A consistent, though not excellent, ability to conceptualise and substantiate one's reasoning. Independent, though not always creative, thinking. Fluent and error-free academic English. 8 – Good. The tasks have been well carried out, but without razor-sharp intelligence or creativity. Mostly apt use of the necessary critical and theoretical terms. A good, though predictable, understanding of the relation between form and content. A limited grasp of the discursive contingencies and their contradictions. An inconsistent, and varying in degree of success, ability to conceptualise and substantiate one's reasoning. Coherent and logical thinking derived from learned sources. Mostly fluent and error-free academic English. 7 – Average. The tasks have been carried out selectively and without much cognitive labour. A tendency towards inept use of critical and theoretical terms. A predictable and limited understanding of the relation between form and content. An amateurish grasp of the discursive contingencies and their contradictions. An inconsistent, mostly inadequate, ability to conceptualise and substantiate one's reasoning. Struggle with logic and coherence of thought, as made manifest in reproduction of the ideas of others. Some instances of relying on Internet sources may be detected. Lack of fluency and correct grammar in the use of academic English. 6 – Satisfactory. The tasks have been carried out selectively and with little cognitive labour. Inept use of critical and theoretical terms. An inconsistent, and largely inadequate, understanding of the relation between form and content. A weak and amateurish grasp of the discursive contingencies and their contradictions. Lack of ability to conceptualise and substantiate one's reasoning. Struggle with logic and coherence of thought, as made manifest in reproduction (not always successful) of the ideas of others. Multiple instances of relying on Internet sources may be detected. Lack of fluency and correct grammar in the use of academic English. 5 – Poor. The tasks have been carried out selectively and poorly. Irresponsible and/or incompetent use of critical and theoretical terms. Lack of understanding of the relation between form and content. A poor grasp of the discursive contingencies and their contradictions. Lack of ability to conceptualise and substantiate one's reasoning. Struggle with logic and coherence of thought, as made manifest in poor reproduction of the ideas of others. Prevalent instances of relying on Internet sources. Poor use of academic English. 4-0 – Fail. None of the tasks has been adequately carried out to show the student's intellectual competences developed in the course. N.B. In case of suspicion regarding academic integrity, the student will be asked to account for his or her work in a form of viva voce defense in the Department of English Philology.
