Purpose of the course unit (module): programme competencies to be developed The course aims to acquaint students with the history of eighteenth and nineteenth-century English and American literature within their social, historical, cultural, religious, and philosophical contexts. It further seeks to introduce prominent authors from the Age of Enlightenment, Romanticism, and the Victorian era. The objectives include fostering an understanding of the artistic achievements found in canonical texts, cultivating analytical skills for text analysis and contextual interpretation, and enhancing comprehension of how national distinctiveness is expressed within the broader context of Western European literary history. Generic competencies to be developed: Responsibility: will be able to set goals, choose and use resources necessary for the completion of a task, plan their time, and follow deadlines. Cooperation: will be able to work in a team by setting common goals, sharing information, and looking for solutions together. Intercultural competence: respect and openness to other cultures, the ability to work in a multicultural environment: will be able to understand the specifics of different cultures and to analyze and assess cultural contexts; will be able to study, work, and communicate with people from different cultural backgrounds and develop awareness, respect, and openness to cultural diversity. Problem-solving: will be able to identify problems and challenges in their own and related fields; will be able to identify problems by finding, analyzing, and critically assessing relevant information, generate new ideas, and choose the most optimal solutions. Openness to change: will be open to new ideas, strive to change, and be creative and innovative; will be able to evaluate the quality of their actions and achievements and will strive to acquire the competencies necessary for future change. Subject-specific competencies: Essential knowledge and skills of literary science: perception of literature as a phenomenon and perception of literature as a scientific discipline. Understanding and analysis of English literature: the ability to analyze and interpret English literature as a phenomenon: will gain knowledge of the development of English literature, the most important authors, and the

most significant works; will be able to analyze, interpret, and evaluate the phenomena of English literature in the wider context of world literature, using appropriate terminology and methods. Understanding English culture: will gain knowledge of English-speaking countries (especially Great Britain) and their socio-cultural context (aspects of geography, history, public policy, literature and art, mentality and self-awareness, customs and traditions, everyday communication conventions, etc.); will be able to distinguish the most prominent features of British culture, compare the culture of English-speaking countries with Lithuanian culture, and identify and explain similarities and differences. Essential knowledge and skills of literary science: perception of literature as a phenomenon and perception of literature as a scientific discipline: will know, understand, and be able to describe literature as a phenomenon and properly use and interpret the basic concepts and terms of literary studies; will acquire knowledge of the main branches and methods of literary studies. Ability to apply philological knowledge and skills in practice within and outside the University: will be able to apply the acquired knowledge and skills of English philology during communication and cooperation in an intercultural (and multilingual) environment, creating, translating and editing various texts, teaching English as a foreign language, etc.; will be able to use modern information technologies, data resources and research resources to conduct a literary analysis of English texts and present the results of analysis and/or interpretation to the public to contribute to the practical applicability of English philology studies (corpora, dictionaries, term banks and glossaries, thematic websites, literature maps, etc.).

Learning outcomes of the course unit (module)	Teaching and learning methods	Assessment methods
Subject learning outcomes: upon successful completion of the course, students will be able to understand the literary processes within the history of eighteenth and nineteenth-century English and American literature; students will be able to identify and define the distinctive features of the epochs (The Age of Enlightenment, Romanticism, Victorian era), and appreciate the aesthetics of canonic writing of the eighteenth and nineteenth-century England. Students will be able to analyze and interpret canonic texts; and define their generic, structural, and thematic features, and the mechanisms of the formation of meaning. Students will be able to analyze and interpret the texts through the perspective of the poetics and aesthetics of the text and its (philosophical, cultural, religious, historical, and social) contexts. Students will be able to independently research the topics assigned to them, and develop a critical, creative, and responsible approach to their research assignment. Students will acquire knowledge of the literary processes of the history of eighteenth and nineteenth-century English and American literature and will be able to further analyze the literary processes of twentieth-century English Literature: its major authors, works, genres, texts, and contexts.	The mode of delivery of lectures and seminars is inclusive teaching to benefit all students with their strengths and contributions to class discussions; to have a wider range of views and experiences which can lead to a more critical understanding of a subject. In-class activities consist of various tasks such as discussion on the passages of the primary and background reading in class; adequately reporting on the content of the text (its extracts) read in class; thought-mapping, literary maps, and individual feedback from the instructor (if required). Homework assignments include not only reading primary texts but also background reading and research from various sources to investigate the topic area in question, carrying out individual small-scale research, and preparing and delivering it in class.	The overall grade for the course is determined by two parts: Part 1 (Topics 1-7) contributes 50 percent, and Part 2 (Topics 8-17) contributes the remaining 50 percent. To successfully pass the course, it is mandatory to achieve a positive grade (5) in both parts. If a student receives a negative grade in either Part 1 or Part 2, they will fail the entire course. However, in the event of a failure in one part, students have the opportunity to retake the failed segment during the retake session in September. For more specific details, please refer to the information provided below (pp. 5-6). Possible points for seminar work (at the instructor's discretion).

Assessment strategy	Weight, %	Deadline	Assessment criteria
Continuous assessment → The overall grade for the two-part (Part 1 and Part 2) course →	50% +50%	Throughout the course	The overall grade for the course is determined by two parts: Part 1 (Topics 1-5) contributes 50 percent, and Part 2 (Topics 6-9) contributes the remaining 50 percent. To successfully pass the course, achieving a positive grade (5) in both parts is mandatory. If a student receives a negative grade in either Part 1 or Part 2, they will fail the entire course. However, in the event of a failure in one part, students have the opportunity to retake the failed segment during the retake session.
Part 1: Midterm test →	40 %	Part 1 midterm test is scheduled for March 4	The midterm examination for Part 1 (40 percent) is a test that is made of 5 (both closed-ended and open-ended) questions. Each question is worth 2 points. Each question falls into a few segments: one of the segments will test the knowledge of the content of the book/ poem/ play, and the other segment(s) will ask you to identify and explain one or another aspect of the book discussed in lectures and seminars.
Part 2: Midterm test →	40%	Part 2 midterm test is scheduled for May 6	The midterm examination for Part 2 (40 percent) is a test that is made of 5 (both closed-ended and open-ended) questions. Each question is worth 2 points. Each question falls into a few segments: one of the segments will test the knowledge of the content of the book/ poem/ play, and the other segment(s) will ask you to identify and explain one or another aspect of the book discussed in lectures and seminars.

			explain one or another aspect of the book discussed in lectures and seminars. The examination test for Part 2 (60 percent) is a test that is made of 2 (both closed-ended and open-ended) questions. Each question is worth 5 points. Each question falls into a few segments: one of the segments will test the knowledge of the content of the book/ poem/ play, and the other segment(s) will ask you to identify and explain one or another aspect of the book discussed in lectures and seminars.
Assessment of examination tasks→			Examinations are graded on a 10-point scale ↓ (see below). Grades in the range of 4.5 to 4.9 are not rounded up to 5 due to the policy that negative grades are not rounded up to a positive grade. However, grades from 5.1 onwards are rounded up to the next whole number. Examination Assessment 10 (Excellent)  The comprehension of the course material is exceptional; the student exhibits a comprehensive understanding of the subject matter, skillfully applying acquired knowledge to address exam questions. Demonstrating a coherent and logical articulation, the student effectively conveys their approach to theme analysis, persuasively developing arguments. Moreover, the student adeptly integrates the social-historical, cultural, religious, and philosophical context of the period. When employing theoretical methods in analysis, the student does so appropriately. Additionally, the student consistently communicates in academic English. 9 (Very good)  The understanding of the course material is solid, showcasing the student's adept application of knowledge in responding to exam questions. The arguments presented are logical and well-articulated, demonstrating a clear grasp of key concepts. The student effectively incorporates the social-historical, cultural, religious, and philosophical context into their analysis. When employing theoretical methods, the student does so appropriately. Furthermore, the student consistently communicates in academic English. 8 (Good)  The student demonstrates a good understanding of the course material, providing correct answers to exam questions. While examples are given, they lack sufficient substantiation. The grasp of major concepts is generally sound, although occasional mistakes are noted. In analysis, the student appropriately references the social-historical, cultural, religious, and philosophical context. Additionally, the student incorporates literary criticism

		into their analysis. Notably, the use of academic English is correct throughout. 7 (Highly satisfactory)  The student displays a basic familiarity with the course programme and the ability to apply knowledge independently. However, there are unessential shortcomings in their answers to exam questions, characterized by a lack of in-depth knowledge and substantiation, with occasional errors, discrepancies, and illogical reasoning. The student does not consistently refer to the social-historical, cultural, religious, and philosophical context in their responses. Furthermore, there are some flaws in the use of academic English. 6 (Satisfactory)  The student possesses a below-average understanding of the course programme materials. While familiar with most content, discussions lack consistency and a logical structure, with limited examples provided. It appears that the student did not invest a sufficient amount of time and effort into studying the subject, resulting in inconsistent knowledge. Furthermore, the student minimally draws on the social-historical, cultural, religious, and philosophical context in their discussions. Additionally, the academic English used by the student exhibits notable flaws. 5 (Sufficient)  The student's knowledge of the course programme barely meets the minimum requirements for a passing grade. There is limited proficiency in applying the acquired knowledge, and the overall knowledge base is meager. The student fails to incorporate the social-historical, cultural, religious, and philosophical context of the period into their understanding. Furthermore, their use of academic English is notably poor. 4,3, 2,1 (Insufficient)  The student falls significantly short of meeting the minimum criteria for mastery of the course programme materials. Their understanding of the subject matter is very poor, bordering on nonexistent, or the knowledge they possess is irrelevant and insufficient. This inadequacy is evident in their inability to answer exam questions appropriately. Notably, the student has neglected to read the required books (poems) on the Required Reading List. Furthermore, their use of language lacks academic precision, as they resort to an informal register and present answers in bullet points, further diminishing the quality of their responses.

Reading Requirement: All books on the Required Reading List must be read in their entirety. Summaries or plot descriptions available online are not an acceptable substitute.		Throughout the term	Attendance requirements.  Students are required to attend a minimum of 70 percent of classes for both Part 1 and Part 2. In other words, the attendance expectation is 70 percent for Part 1 and 70 percent for Part 2. This attendance standard is rooted in the well-established and consistent correlation between learning (or academic performance) and class attendance. Lectures, discussions, and in-class activities contribute significantly to understanding and internalizing the subject matter.  Failure to meet the 70 percent seminar attendance requirement will result in the student being ineligible to sit for the June exam.
